Unemployment Insurance Is Expected To Give Lift About February 1.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27 .- (AP)-Officials of the Social Security Board expect business to receive a lift about February 1 from the payment of unemployment insurance benefits in 21 states and the District of Columbia.

Board officials said today time alone would tell how much of the $437,800,000 reserve of the unemployment insurance systems would be paid this winter. They said they would have no idea until insured workers who have lost their jobs begin to register after January 1.

An immediate upswing in business probably would reduce the amount considerably, the officials

PLEBISCITE ON WAR

Says U. S. 'Liquidated' Panay Incident, Can Do Nothing to Japan.

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 27.—(P)— The United States "liquidated" the Panay incident, Premier Musso-lini's newspaper asserted today, because "really nothing can be done against Japan."

A biting editorial in the newspaper Popolo d'Italia gave Il Duce's views of the Panay settlement and poked jibes at opponents of the Ludlow proposal to require a national referendum in the United States before a declaration of war.
"After the Panay incident," said the article discussing the American gunboat sunk in China by Japanese bombers, "there was a wave of bellicose instincts in the United States which now is calming down in view of and considering that really nothing can be done against Japan.

"Could Only Send Notes."

"They only could send notes, to which Japan replied in a correct and solicitous manner which the same government of the United States found satisfactory enough to liquidate the episode."

The editorial said the Ludlow proposal had fallen under "this warmonger noise.

Opposition to the proposed con-stitutional amendment, especially from the American government and newspapers, "gives documentation that democracy has faults and that its principles are applicable only in the ordinary contin-gencies of life and not in the extraordinary."

The paper said the Ludlow proposal committed the unpardonable error of taking democracy seriously.

Referendums Fine "When."

"Can you imagine war being declared by referendum? Referendums are fine when it is a question of choosing a suitable spot for a town fountain, but when the supreme interests of a people are at governments take care not to trust the people's judgment.

This map shows the route of the new Sino-Russian super-highway. It is over this route that the new Soviet ambassador to China has been flying for several weeks, making many stops. He arrived yesterday at Hankow, shown in the lower right, after having flown from Lanchow, capital of Kangsu, shown at the junction of the two military roads. The spur from Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia, near the Siberian border, would enable Russsia, in the event of assistance to China, to send troops direct to Chengtu, capital of Szechwan province, which is due west from Shanghai, Nanking and Hankow. The first two cities and Tsinan, capital of Shantung province, are in Japanese hands.

Germany's well-developed interests at Tsingtao were taken over by Japan early in the World War, and the city, with a normal Japanese population of 30,000, became one of Japan's major stakes in China, although full sovereignty inTsingtao and the surrounding district, and direction of the Tsingtao-Tsinan railway, were restored to China in 1922.

The capture of Tsinan followed the army's announcement at Tientsin that "drastic punitive action" would be taken for Chinese destruction of some $100,000,000 worth of Japanese property at Tsingtao.

The property, chiefly cotton mills, had been held by the Chinese since the outbreak of the undeclared war as hostage against

AN EASY WAY TO UNDERSTAND WHAT IT TAKES TO MAKE ALUMINUM CHEAP

YOUR WIFE WILL BE INTERESTED IN THIS FACT

Up to fifty years ago, aluminum was a precious metal. When Hall made his invention the commercial price was $8 a pound. But we knew aluminum would never amount to much until it was really cheap.

With the same kind of ore and essentially the same process, we are now able to produce raw aluminum to sell in bulk for 20 cents a pound. A lot of economies, big and little, have created that low price.

For instance, there is the matter of electricity. Many expensive things must be done to get aluminum out of its ore. The final step calls for a lot of electricity. Enough electricity to supply an average home for 35 years is needed to make one ton.

To get enough cheap electricity to make aluminum cheap, we have invested millions in dams and powerhouses, often in remote sections of the country.

A lot of our money has gone into these plants, and into other big, efficient factories needed to make aluminum cheap. It is because others seemingly are unwilling to risk so heavy an investment that we are still the only company in this country making virgin aluminum:

It is because of these investments that we have been able to make raw aluminum so cheap that you see it everywhere.

ATLANTA, GA., DECEMBER 28, 1937.

ON A CASH BASIS

The city of Atlanta will enter the new year with all bills and salaries paid, according to Comptroller B. Graham West. The promise made by Mayor Hartsfield at the time of his election, that he would wipe out the municipal deficit, has thus been made good. For the first time in many years the city is not only operating on a properly balanced budget, but does not have to borrow money from the banks or issue scrip in order to pay salaries or meet current Citizens of Atlanta can have no better New Year gift from their city government than this. It should encourage and hearten every businessman in the community and should do much to reawaken that Atlanta spirit which must be a leading factor in the continuance of a commercial and industrial prosperity that is sweeping the city on toward a better year than any of the past.

The concrete advantages from this condition of municipal solvency are many.

It enables the city, by paying cash, to take advantage of discounts in making its purchases that result in large savings. It permits freer competition for city business and allows purveyors of city supplies to cut their margin of profit, because of the ready cash available and the removal of all credit risk.

It also permits more intelligent planning for the improvement of all types of city service. It permits the city governing body to prepare its annual budget with exact knowledge of anticipated income.

While the happy situation permits better management of city affairs and expansion of municipal activities, the program for the coming year must not exceed the sure revenue. Having reached a cash basis, the city should stay there. City council, having experienced the happy results of economy and proper handling of finances, may be trusted to guard against any future extravagance which would undo the good results achieved.

THE COMMITTEE ON COUNTY AWARDS

A committee of three distinguished Georgians has been named to select the 13, out of the 159 counties in Georgia, which shall receive the awards offered in The Constitution's $7,500 Progressive Government program.

Thirteen counties which, after all the claims are filed, are adjudged to have best served their citizens during 1937, will receive the awards ranging from $3,500 for first place, to $250 for the winners in the 10 congressional districts. When the winners are announced the entire state, including every county which participated in the program, will join in heartiest congratulations and sincere commendation of the excellent work achieved by each of the 13

Yet the award winners will not be the only beneficiaries. For the year's program has brought inestimable benefits to every citizen of every county which has actively entered for the awards. The greatest benefit has come, as hoped for, in the improved service, the greater economy and the added public conveniences which have been achieved in every county in

The friendly rivalry between the different county entrants has resulted in a reawakening of administrative efficiency and public-thinking citizenship all over the state.

When the final awards are announced the 13 winners will stand high in the annals of Georgia counties of progress. Yet their gain will be but slightly greater than that of the counties which do not win. For all have benefited and received a new impetus to public participation in government which will not halt with the coming of 1938, but will continue to bring its steadily increasing value through the years to come.

A committee for verse and prose recitations in public houses is now active in London. Latecomers will please not walk on the face on the barroom floor.

AN "INCIDENT" CLOSED

The acceptance by the United States government of Japanese apologies and guarantees in connection with the sinking of the U. S. S. Panay in the Yangtze river closed a threatening "incident" in a manner which forcefully testifies to the wisdom of calmness and level-headedness in international relations.

Reports from Tokyo indicate genuine rejoicing, both by the Japanese government and people, at the amicable settlement of a situation which might have brought a serious breach in the peaceful relations between the two coun-

The Panay affair, deeply regrettable in itself, has served to reveal the intense desire of the Japanese as a whole to do nothing which would arouse the animosity of the United States. In the series of notes between the two governments which followed the incident, Tokyo revealed an anxiety to atone which shows the sincere wish of Japan to remain on friendly terms with this nation. To no other power, not even Britain, have the Japanese so humbled themselves by apology and official desire for amends as they have the United States. They have gone to lengths of humility that are remarkable for an Oriental power, imbued with its inherited instinct to "save face," at all costs.

The Tokyo government has proffered assurances that there will be no repetition of incidents such as the sinking of the Panay. No guarantees, unfortunately, can make absolutely certain that fresh causes for irritation will not arise. The Japanese military and naval authorities seem to be beyond the control of the civilian government in Tokyo. What is more, even the army and naval commanders do not seem able, at all times, to control the actions of subordinates in the field.

Under such conditions there may be additional causes for friction between Japan and the United States. While American citizens. American armed forces and American ships remain in the theater of the Sino-Japanese war, it will be difficult to avoid such events.

The American people can only determine to remain calm at all times, to let reason rather than emotion dictate their attitude and to hope that any further issues that may arise will be brought to a settlement as satisfactory as the now "closed incident" of the Panay.

NEWTON DIEHL BAKER

Newton Diehl Baker died in his sixty-seventh year after a life of service to his nation, of powerful influence in world affairs and a professional career that made him one of the greatest attorneys of his day.

As secretary of war in the cabinet of President Woodrow Wilson, he mobilized the greatest army in the history of the United States, directing an organization of training, transport, supply and fighting men which still is the marvel of military men all over the world.

He was a man of concise, clear thinking and prompt decision. He met one of the most difficult tasks that has fallen to the lot of any American of the present century with an ability which seemed to rise to meet every new demand.

During recent years Mr. Baker had practically retired from all interests save those of his profession, the law. He retained, however, a keen interest in international affairs and viewed the world panorama from a height of understanding only possible to a man with his experience and background. In resigning from his last active office in the Democratic party, that of chairman of the Cuvahoga Count Democratic executive committee, which is the county of Cleveland, Ohio, he declared that younger men are needed to direct the affairs of the party and the nation at this time.

He was, comparatively, a young man at the time when the war called him to his greatest national service. His career, if carefully studied, will serve as inspiration for the young men of today and tomorrow, who lift the torch of democracy from the hands of the older men who pass, one by one, out of the active arena of national and world affairs.

The Rev. Peter Marshall, until a few months ago pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church in Atlanta, delivered the Christmas Day sermon heard by President Roosevelt and a congregation that overflowed onto the streets of Washington. He is now pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church in the national capital.

Thus a preacher who was a favorite among Atlantans a short time ago, awoke last Sunday morning to find his name, and excerpts from his sermon, on the front page of practically every newspaper in the nation.

A native of Scotland, the Rev. Peter Marshall secured his theological training at Columbia Seminary, in Decatur. He combines with deep religious sincerity an arresting pulpit personality and holds his hearers enthralled by the almost dramatic forcefulness of his delivery.

The Westminster church here called him to its pastorate when he was far younger than most men chosen for such important ecclesiastical posts. He won more than local popularity during his Atlanta pastorate and now, in Washington, has made his name one of nationwide significance.

The opportunity to serve that has thas come to the Rev. Peter Marshall at an early age is one enjoyed by few men. That he will serve by following the precepts of his Master but enlarges the scope of opportunity that today lies before him.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE THIRD BASKET WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Before long, plenty of powerful corporation executives are going to be regretting their a revision of the undistributed profits tax.

When the President's celebrated, business-conciliating tax revision scheme is announced, the corporation executives will find it contains a devilish little scheme called "the third basket." And when they examine "the third basket," they will discover that it makes enforcement of the New Deal's dividend distribution policies more stringent than ever.

"The third basket" will chiefly affect outsized companies. Particularly, it will affect outsized companies which may be suspected of building up undue reserves to spare their large stockholders the pain of income tax payments. Giving large securities owners as much income tax pain as possible was the original objective of the undistributed profits tax. The New Deal, mulish as ever, has not abandoned its objective.

Lest this morsel of news cause too much melancholia among busismen, it should be said that the tax revision plan as now completed will make things much easier for 80 to 90 per cent of the corporations in this country. All concerns making less than $25,000 annually are exempted from the undistributed profits tax. And except for those caught in the "third basket," the principles of the tax have been greatly relaxed for concerns making more than

102 AND 351 "The third basket" was invented by Representative Fred M. Vinson, Democrat, of Kentucky. As chairman of the tax revision subcommittee of the house ways and means committee, the exceedingly clever Mr. Vinson has been pondering the problem of what to do about the undistributed profits tax for a good long time. He wanted to retain the tax's basic effectiveness, yet correct its injustices and make business a bit

Until recently the problem seemed insoluble. Then Mr. Vinson suddenly remembered Sections 102 and 351 of the existing revenue law. Section 102 penalizes the unreasonable accumulation of surplus by any corporation. Section 351 lays heavy taxes on rich men's personal holding companies.

Section 102 has proved unenforceable in the courts. Whenever the government has said that a company's surplus was unreasonable, the company's management has replied that it wasn't. Courts have always believed the managements. Section 351 has proved more effective, because it lays a definite tax on a welldefined type of company.

CONCEPTION OF A BASKET Now the intention of the undistributed profits tax is to prevent stockholders from using any sort of company as a personal holding company. The theory is that companies which allow their profits to accumulate unduly become, in effect, incorporated private pocketbooks for the rich.

Therefore, Mr. Vinson asked himself, why not blend the good features of 102 and 351 Section 351 was effective because its definitions were clear and detailed. Extend your definitions from personal holding companies to cover all companies with unreasonable surpluses, and all will be well. So Mr. Vinson reasoned, and thus 'the third basket" was invented.

Mr. Vinson presented his "basket" to the President, who found it wonderfully good. At present the "basket" is being woven in detail by the tax experts at the Treasury. It will be presented to Mr. Vinson's subcommittee as soon as it is polished into final shape, and then, no doubt, someone will explain its peculiar nickname.

UNHAPPY DAYS FOR HENRY The "basket" may be unfinished and its name may be incomprehensible, but enough about it is known to permit positive statement that it won't prove pleasing to Henry Ford, the du Pont family and other "economic royalists." These are the people the New Dealers have always wanted to get at with their tax programs. Now that they have ornamented a business-conciliating tax revision with a mantrap for Mr. Ford, the New Dealers are

That there would be a mantrap somewhere in the revised revenue law was to be expected from the start. When tax revision was decided on, three points of view on the subject were prevalent in Washington.

The conservatives believed that the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes were really harmful to business. The moderates, such as Mr. Vinson, doubted the real harmfulness, but conceded the need for revision on the ground that the taxes ha come symbols of business terror, and must therefore be modified. The left-wingers pooh-poohed the psychology of the moderates and the reasoning of the conservatives, maintaining that businessmen were using the depression as a smoke-screen behind which unjust tax abatements might be obtained.

From the first, the President stood somewhere between the moderates and the left-wingers. He disliked the idea of being forced into tax revision, yet agreed that some changes might be necesas confidence producers. Now Mr. Vinson is evolving his "basket," which permits the President to have his cake and eat it too. It looks as though nothing short of a conservative rebellion in the senate could upset the "basket." (Copyright, 1937, by The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

> Back logs! Yes, we need back logs, not during Christmas only when life slows down for leisured hours of fellowship and reflection, but for all the weeks of all the years. We need the back logs of physical reserve to sustain our nerves amid the stress and strain of the hurrying days. need back logs of intellectual reserve to meet and master the unexpected turns of a day of upheaval and misgiving. We need back logs of emotional reserve to compassionately meet the constant appeal of a broken and bruised humanity. Three Coats of Paint Make a Rough Timber Smooth, But It Comes Off Easily

By ROBERT QUILLEN. Within recent months, for the first time in our generation, we have read and heard much about classes. But there have been classes in America since the beginning. The "equality" that makes this land more blessed than any other is not revealed by what men are, but by their equal right to become. The youngster who has it in him may reach the top, whether rn in a mansion or a shack. Now, as in early times, the higher-up snobbishly snub the lowerdown, for that is human nature; but it isn't a thing to deplore. For if failures were rewarded as the successful are, nobody would exert himself to be a success.

Everywhere and always, one of man's chief desires is to rise above his fellows and win their respect and admiration. And America is the one land where the poorest boy can do it.

Jefferson was almost alone among the fathers in believing all men equal. The illegitimate alien, Alexander Hamilton, wished to hold the common people down, and no rich and educated gentleman relished the idea of giving the ballot to the illiverate, lousy and unwashed descendants of bond servants.

Class distinction remained at least as late as 1829—32 years

Mrs. Trollope's bitter book, describing Americans of that period, tells how she almost swooned with horror when she saw servant girls eating with the family, common workmen and their wives calling on refined people, and the unwashed introducing themselves to the President. Yet at Cincinnati, where she attended a ball and noted the absence of a fair acquaintance, she was told that the girl wasn't invited because her father was a mechanic. A mechanic was not the social equal of a storekeeper. That would doubtless amuse Walter Chrysler, who is still proud of his mechanical skill.

It is the custom now to judge classes by their money. Speaking in project of the middle leave the statement of the skill.

in praise of the middle class, Henry Eckhardt recently said: "By middle classes, we mean the families who have a $1,200 to $5,000 annual income

Properly understood, that is true; but otherwise it is misleading and unfair. These are not middle class because they have such incomes; they have such incomes because they are middle class—which means sensible, trained, industrious, well-behaved and useful. The upper class in other lands consists of the nobility-rich idlers whose ancestors were enriched by the King. Here it consists of middle class people whose ancestors made and kept money for sev-

The lower class, if not mentally deficient, can become middle class in one generation of schooling, hard work, thrift and decent behavior; the middle class can become upper class in two or three generations of good management and good luck; and a war, a panic and a famine can make them all lower class again.

Beer Profits in Denmark Allocated To Cause of Art

COPENHAGEN, Denmark-(By Mail to U. S.)-Never before did I know so many of our Americans had such welldeveloped artistic yearnings.

But it is, nevertheless, a fact that many of my best friends have well-defined leanings toward the aid and upbuilding of art and are not appreciated as they would be in Denmark.

The finest museums in the world are in Denmark. There are, outside the museums, magnificent pieces of art in the town squares. They do not buy mail-order statuary. They have

Ol is the answer. The O in the word Ol should have a line drawn through it from top right to lower left as the Danes have a couple of extra letters in their alphabet.

Ol is the word for beer. And it is pronounced almost exactly as is the first name of the president of the Atlanta baseball club, Mr. Earl Mann.

When one drinks a certain brand of pilsner beer in Denmark one is working in the vineyard of art. A great brewer died some years ago and left his tremendous brewery to a board of trust who work at a flat salary. All the profits, and they run into the millions of dollars, go to the cause of art.

If a town wants to buy a famous statue it applies to the board for aid and if the art is real art, the town gets Old castles have been rebuilt at the cost of several millions of dollars. Priceless works of art, old books of inestimable value, museum pieces of furniture and countless works of art have been purchased by the beer drinkers. Even those who are blessed with no talents or money may feel that glow that comes to the worker in the arts if they will but visit Denmark.

MY FELLOW WORKERS.

This raises many of my fellow workers in my esteem. have in mind various friends on the staff of The Constitution and others on The Journal, Georgian and Associated Press staffs, whose efforts are not appreciated or understood.

Ever since the return of beer they have been trying to express some hidden urge within themselves. And now I know they merely were seeking to express an artistic impulse. Within them burned not thirst but a desire to aid art.

In Denmark the Americans say: Would you care to join me in a few minutes of toil on behalf of art?'

And then he will say to the waiter, "Make it a 'Fodbad,' as I wish seriously to aid the cause of art."

"Footbath," and if one orders a "Footbath," a flagon of beer which will float a small battleship.

There are no drunks in Denmark. They have no re-strictions on the sale of beer, wines or hard drinks. They actually practice real temperance. And they tax the hard drinks to a point where they are costly. Denmark has been called "The Kingdom of Reason," and it seems to be just that. They do not seem to go off half cocked. They have almost no crimes of violence or fobbery.

They have many fine customs and the one which permits even the humblest citizen to aid the great cause of art is one which seems to be appreciated.

MANY FINE PATRONS.

In some years of getting around the sports world I have seen many characters who would have been magnificent patrons favored. of the arts. They devoted many hours of their lives to the consumption of Ol, or beer, and it is too bad their talents were wasted on the artless air.

The Old Orioles, those baseball players who made baseball history and much that is the game itself, almost to a man devoted themselves to the motions which signify in this country a patron of the arts.

The Atlanta baseball team of 1930 would have been supreme patrons of the finer arts. They had, almost to a man, definite artistic talents in that direction.

Just across the street from The Constitution, where the Messrs. Angelo and George Hanjaras had erected Greek temples to the Goddess of Food, and also in other places, men and women may be seen practicing the ritual of the real Danish patron of the arts. But, it is an empty ritual.

In this country the drinker of O1 not only enjoys his beer but feels an inner satisfaction in the thought that at that very moment he may be contributing to the purchase of a great painting by Reubens or Rembrandt.

There is an American here who came to stay two weeks and has been here four years. "All my life," he said, "I suffered from a frustration. Only the Mellons and the Carnegies could give to art. Here, in my own humble way, I am a donor. I walk about the museums and the parks and I say, "Here is a part of my handiwork."

A CITY OF COPPER.

This is a city of copper roofs and spires and of statues. Almost every roof has its small statues. And the streets, which are laid out in a patchwork of twists and turns, discover little parks with really magnificent statues of Copenhagen's and of Denmark's famous men.

Name some? It's easy.

There are records of this country since 10,000 years B. C. Its first king was crowned in 826, a mere 666 years before a fellow named Columbus started out to discover a short route to India.

Hans Christian Andersen is one-the writer of the most charming fairy stories ever written.

Neils Finsen was the first to discover light rays as a treatment for disease.

Valdemat Poulsen was the first to discover the chief principle of broadcasting, the sending of waves instead of intermittent sparks. He was just 28 when he invented the telegraphone. In 1908 he telephonedwithout wires-for a distance of 145 miles in Denmark. And in 1914, before anyone really dreamed of radio as we have it today, Poulsen had broadcast gramophone music from Berlin to Copenhagen.

Ivar Knudsen built the first oil-driven ocean ship. There are many others great in art and science and education.

And Denmark remembers them. The little parks-and the large ones-are everywhere.

Favored Californians Showed Most Power in First Half.

By JACK TROY.

PASADENA. Dec. 27.-California's Golden Bears rumbled into town today to resume training for Saturday's Rose Bowl battle with the Alabama Crimson Tide.

Those Bears residing in Southern California were here for Christmas. The others came from their homes in the northern part of the state. Reassembling under Coach Stub Allison, they immediately opened secret practice at Brookside park.

While the Bears worked, Alabama also got in some intensive practice licks at Occidental field. The Tide is exclusive, too. Only newspapermen can see the Crimson practice and the sooner they leave the field the better the coaches like it.

BEAR FIGURES. Figures pertinent to Califor-nia's splendid season were avail-able today. They show what a

Why they must do this is very apparent. The Bears are big and there is a definite lack of reserves. They can be worn down. The regulars, that is. And so they give everything they have while the flesh is strong, so to speak. After the intermission, it seems the spirit is willing but the flesh

The Bears scored only 52 points in the second half of the 10 games, which barely provides an average of a touchdown a second half.

So they're saying that Alabama's only hope is to hold 'em, 'Bama, in the first half. They're saying that a good bet is that California will core as many points in one quarter as Alabama will score in the entire game.

Odds on the game have zoomed up to 3 to 1 in California's favor. This puts the Crimson Tide in a very favorable position. And it is

Our regular riders are familiar with the many advantages of trackless trolleys. With uninterrupted service between Hapeville and Atlanta we are confident many other citizens of Hapeville, not now regular riders, will prefer trackless trolleys to any other form of transportation.

White Heather Given for Luck 'At Mr. and Mrs. Hastings' Party Henry L. Johnson

By Sally Forth.

MR. AND MRS. DONALD HASTINGS greeted their guests at their annual open house on Sunday by presenting each with a spray of white heather, signifying luck for the coming year. Mary Louise Hastings, young daughter of the hosts, looking particularly lovely in a pale blue frock, made the presentation from a huge silver tray heaped high with the Scottish symbol for good luck.

The party was held at the Clairmont avenue home in Decatur of Donald's father, H. G. Hastings, and like all of their parties, it bore the unmistakable stamp of Mrs. Hastings' artistic touch. Throughout the spacious rooms of the home, the doorways and windows were outlined in garlands of fragrant cedar. Crimson-berried holly banked the mantels which were centered with arrangements of red roses.

And on tables, consoles and floor standards were bowls and boxes of growing valley lilies in the height of their fragrant bloom.

Delicious syllabub, reminiscent of your grandmother's day, was served in the dining room where the decorative motif was entirely in white and crystal. The beautifully appointed tea table, covered with an imported lace cloth, was graced with a crystal bowl filled with valley lilies, the central arrangement being flanked on either side by graceful crystal trees. Huge crystal bowls filled with the foamy white beverage stood on the buffet and serving tables, reminding the guests of the days when Scarlett O'Hara Served it at her notable parties. Coffee was served in the library where the decorations combined quantities of long-stemmed red roses with growing valley lilies.

The hostess, who is one of soelety's most beautiful as well as one of its most charming mem-bers, chose for the occasion a flesh-tinted chiffon gown traced in an indistinct pattern of gold. Her flowers were three magnificent pale pink orchids which grew on one stem and formed a perfect complement for her becoming costume and dainty

SALLY FORTH thinks one of the best Christmas activity stories she heard centers about Jessie Pottinger, who as everybody knows is the able president of Atlanta's Young Matrons' Cir-cle for Tallulah Falls School. Her members provide Christmas gifts and good things for the entire school, and Mrs. Pottinger re-solved that home occupations which press rather heavily at Christmas should not prevent her acceptance of a pressing invita-tion to come up with some of ther officials—as honor guests of the Christmas dinner and tree and ceremonies which mark the season at Tallulah.

Says Mrs. Pottinger, who has the power of perpetual motion and great organization: "I made up my mind I would go and I did, and felt well repaid for the effort, though things in Atlanta thickened about me considerably, and I don't believe I'll have to fly more rapidly even when I'm an angel than was necessary to cover all the ground necessary."

Leaving Atlanta Wednesday at noon, she attended the Tallulah dinner that night and the Christmas pageant and tree which filed Thursday morning. She reached home Thursday afternoon in time home Thursday afternoon in time to attend a children's party at her home that night, and Friday her family, including father, mother and two boys, left for Sa-vannah to spend the Chrimtsa season with Mr. Pottinger's fam-

FORESTALL A FIVE-POUND WEIGHT GAIN DURING THE HOLIDAYS.

The week between Christmas and New Year's marks an interlude in slimming in which you may easily gain five pounds. It is only natural that you should want to wait until the new year to resume the struggle with curves and calories, but if you put off your dieting until then, it will be like beginning over.

A calorie spree not only breaks down your resistance to the good things, but the physical effects are a stretched tummy and an increasingly voracious appetite. The more you eat, the more you want to eat.

. . And the slightest surplus of food on top of all those Christmas calories will be enough to start your weight on the upgrade.

There is a psychological letdown at the end of the year, and the post-Christmas holidays are something of a trial to the wouldbe slimmer. With assorted canbe slimmer. With assorted can-dies and nuts in plain sight, and the ice box bursting with tempting leftovers, it is no trick at all to pick up five pounds.

If you begin to gain, there is just one thing to do about it—go on the fruit regime. This is not Johnson, of Moultrie, at a home casy, but those of you who have the courage to go on the regime at once will never have to really Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Hurd. Rev. Dear Miss Chatfield: May I take the liberty of giving a little advice to the girls who can "sit under the hair dryer and get a liberal magazine education in the science of attracting the opposite sex?" My letter won't bear much sex?" My letter won't bear much weight with the lovelorn girls because they have heard much argument to the contrary. I know they will think my advice is a hit and miss effort of a mere boy of 25 who, like a blind man in a dark isn't there. But I think I know some girls have boy friends and some don't.

Most girls are insincere. Only rarely do we find one that's de-pendable. But it is with girls as with cars we are more concerned with dependability than with streamlines and beauty. A passably good looking car that's de-pendable is more desirable than the newest costliest model which doesn't perform well.

We fellows give a wide berth to the girls who act. Nine times out of ten they are imitating another girl who is behaving naturally and who has admiring friends in consequence. But if the type they imitate doesn't jibe with their personalities, the mimics are a dle of errors, sometimes funny, sometimes pathetic. "The key note of success is B. Natural:" so girls for your own good be natural.

We fellows don't like too much make-up either. We think of it as make-believe. We want you to look well, with enough help from the druggist to hide your complexion, if you are anemic. In good health you don't need much help. As for clothes, unless you want to appeal to our sex urge and get highly insulted as a result, you'd better not go too far with thin clothes. We have our own ideas of girls who try to interest us in this way.

We understand that it pays to advertise but don't expect sex admiration and respect at the same ime. Girls are no exception to the rule that one must take the bitter along with the sweet. We boys are necessarily different from you girls in many ways. Mother Nature demands that we treat you as you honestly want to be treated. We are all alike in this respect.

In spite of the fact that you preach to one another "Keep him guessing, keep him guessing" it is far-fetched. We want to be sure of our girl friends. especially if we are thinking of marrying. We can't love a girl if she is a "doubtful." When you do get a boy friend, don't try to make him love you. If love comes it will come naturally and involuntarily.

Finally, be what you are, no more, no less, moderatively con-servative, gay but not boistrous, dependable, sincere and genuine and don't expect every boy you meet to fall for you. I'll wager the real boy friend won't want you to

FRIENDLY COUNSEL MY DAY

SEATTLE, Wash., Sunday,-I have a great deal to be thankful for this Christmas. There were moments when I was contemplating starting across the continent and during the journey itself, when I thought I might not reach my destination on Christmas Eve, or, for that matter, on Christmas

Everything, however, worked out beautifully. I owe a debt of gratitude to the various airplane and train officials who made my journey comfortable and agreeable.

· Only one passenger came through all the way to Seattle and on part of the trip she was the only other passenger on the plane. She is Mrs. Hodges, from Council Bluffs, Iowa. With the strange familiarity that travel breeds, I soon felt she was almost an old friend. In any case, I hope we will meet again, for she was a good sport and an uncomplaining traveler.

My son-in-law came so early to meet me at the train, I had to keep him waiting. I was certainly glad to see him, and even happier to a somewhat pale and thin daughter who is evidently on the

The house looked as every proper house should look on Christmas Eve, with wreaths of holly and Christmas greens and mysterious packages behind closed doors.

Anna sat up in bed and gave us orders. Her small daughter, Eleanor, remarked with an evident gleam of joy in her eye, "Grandma has to do what Mummy says." One could see a lurking desire for the day when Eleanor herself could order her "Mummy" around By afternoon, the Christmas tree was dressed and by evening everything was ready. The children hung up their stockings and demanded to know how early they could wake the family. Finally, out of great consideration for their mother, they decided on 7:30.

The hours on Christmas morning flew by and we could hardly believe it when the call came through from Washington and Fort Worth and we found ourselves talking to members of the family in both places. This three-way hooks in occasioned some little in both places. This three-way hook-up occasioned some little confusion. We were just beginning to say something to Elliott in Fort Worth, when Johnny, in Washington, would break into the conversation. But everyone finally had their say and I was glad to know the President had read parts of the "Christmas Carol" to the grandchildren in Washington as we had read parts of it here the grandchildren in Washington, as we had read parts of it here to Eleanor and Curtis.

Some friends of Anna's and John's joined us for dinner, and then the children's immediate playmates, those who gather on the grounds every day, came in for the tree. But by 4:30 quiet reigned again and the real enjoyment of the Christmas presents began think Today everybody has been more than willing to rest and think what a pleasant day Christmas is but how fortunate it is that it only comes once a year, for everyone is so kind we surely would all be spoiled.

Remember That Night By Margaret Gorman Nichols

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE:

When a theatrical company disbands in Harriston a young actress deserts her six-month-old baby. She is adopted by John and Hetty Mallare, who stint to keep her in school and give her singing and dancing lessons. They name her Karen. Her foster-parents dead when she is 20, she quits her dress shop job to go to New York to realize her ambition to be an actress. Jerry Forbes, whose uncle owns the Harriston bank, begs her to marry him, then wishes ker luck, saying he'll be waiting "it you need me." In New York Roxanne Dell, who sings on a hotel root, is her neighbor. After Karen sees the famous Brenda Bond in Philip Ashley's new play, she drops her handbag containing all her money in the lobby. It is returned by a handsome man who is Philip Ashley himself. He takes her to a party to meet Brenda Bond. She overhears a woman's remark about Ashley's picking up girls while Lilyan Kane is in London and leaves. Philip apologizes as he drives her home; she knows she loves him her fame. INSTALLMENT XVI.
"No. I'd like to walk." She wanted to walk in the sunlight with a play under her arm. No one, not even Roxanne, could possibly share her feelings. The street, thickly peopled, was suddenly beautiful. The sky had never been quite so blue above the tall buildings.

With shining eyes she looked at Tommy who put his hand on her shoulder. His smile was twisted. "Don't thank me again, Karen, All the thanks I want is for you to make good. And you will. I've got to be running along now to Marion."

Karen Mallare did queer things to your heart, he thought, as he left her and hailed the first taxi. And Philip had been indignant when he had asked him if he loved her. Tommy thought, "What's wrong with the guy? Why go to England when a girl with everything a man could wish for is right here and crazy about him?"

In a hotel lobby Marion waited for him anxiously.

The man next to her noisily consulted his program. Was he looking for Karen's name? Proudly Roxanne had look-ed at it.

When it was over, she hurried out to wait for Karen at the stage entrance. She had to have some one wait for her this night. At last Karen came out. She for him anxiously.
"Did she . . ." she asked.
"She did," Tommy said.

Now the first thing you've got to do is tell Sam Kasten you've got to do is tell Sam Ras-ten you've crooned your last number in his hotel roof show. You'll miss the money but you can't do two jobs at once." Karen still looked a little dazed, she thought.

Feeling light-headed with happiness, Karen felt she could walk forever. Her hopes took wings. Looking ahead, she was not seeing the multitude coming and going nor the chain of cars. She was seeing a stage, seeing herself on that stage before the footlights,

The morning after the opening she hurried out to buy a Washington paper and could not wait to return to the apartment to read what the Washington critics had written. Standing in the center of the sidewalk, she turned the pages quickly and read quickly.

The critics were doubtful of the play's worth. Lucia Chancery's performance received faint praise from one critic, another flayed her. It was only one sentence but Roxanne read it many times: "A new and exciting personality is Karen Mallare" Karen Mallare."

BUILDING IS BASIC

Frequently, investment opportunities may be found in industries where public demand has been held up by temporary conditions, finally resulting in actual scarcity. Recovery in home building has been delayed, mainly by the lack of balance between building costs and rentals. Lower costs plus Government efforts should greatly expand construction activity which may be reflected in industries in the building material field.
